The usual festivities marked the hours immediately preceding the contest. A street pareds, with the visiting club and the Colts in automobiles, headed by a band in a large van, went through the streets, telling the natives that baseball had come again and that the state was about to begin. Everything started fine. The sun was shining, and many a glad hand was given the men as they rode by. Up Broad Street went the procession, while girls, man and the youngater who knows the batting average of every tosser in the game watched from store windows and other points of vantage.

Real Baseball in Richmond Camp-Rooters Equally Divided.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Suffolk, Va., April 18 (Camp Richmond).—There was real baseball in the Richmond camp to-day, the baseball that makes fans stand up under suspense. Manager Newnham's pets met the fast collegians from the capital city, and the youngsters invaded Richmond camp thirsting for victory. But the United States Richmonders had another story to tell. The game was allve and interesting. There was class and speed to the Collegians' aggregation, but the Andles of Newnham's had a flavor of big leaguers. Dunn, of the youngsters, pitched a heady game, and things went well for him at times in the pinches.

The game was called at the ending of the seventh at the request of the Collegians, because of approaching darkness and injuries sustained by Poe. The game was clean and spicy, deviid of theiting and universe.

darkness and injuries sustained by Poe. The game was clean and spicy, devoid of kicking and unpleasantries that oftimes find their way into a game. The rooters were divided in the bleachers and grandstand. It was hard to tell which side was the favorite, and the Collegians showed up to be such a speedy and clever bunch that they had a following with the fans. But there was much admiration for Newnham's aggregation. They are speedy and sure. Hoffman, Newnham and Prout made assists that savored of big stuff.
